Sometimes when we're online we might ask to join in on a game, just wanting to make new friends, but do we really know who that other person is? They may be another kid or an adult. They may even post a picture that is not them, trying to trick us. After that, they will try to build trust, maybe even saying that they like the very same things that you do, so they start to feel like a real friend. If they try to get you to keep the friendship a secret from parents or any adult, this is a big red flag, and a sure sign that you do need to tell an adult!
