about you or your family is personal, and you should never give that information out online without your parents' or guardian's permission. Seriously, once you put that information online, it's online forever, and other people you'd never consider giving the information to may have access to it. Even if you delete it. That's why it's so important to keep your identity private, even from people you think you're getting to know and who seem pretty friendly. So do let your parents or guardians know about strangers who send you instant messages
